A Word About Auctions

My advertisements soliciting coins for my sales should not be taken as a solicitation for you to dispose of your collection. On the other hand, I advise every collector—young or old—not to place his collection for sale on the too strong impulse of the moment. If you get a trifle tired of your collection, do not shoot it down to the auction room at once. Put your coins away, consider the matter a little, and even if you are really tired of it, hide the thing some place, and it is almost certain that you will some day, either soon or later, revive your interest in our science, and you will then thank your stars that you did not disperse your collection.

But, of course, there are times when one really decides to abandon a thing or hobby. When that time comes, see that you select the right man to whom to entrust your treasure. The one that will be able to net you the best possible returns for your coins.

The above is not intended as a "sermon." It is intended, however, to do some good; and I believe it will. But it is also intended as an advertisement. Of course, you have guessed what I am after before this.

When you decide to sell your collection, I want you to kindly give me a chance to show you that I can net you the best possible returns. Comparison of prices gladly solicited. I catalogue carefully, distribute widely, and, all in all, can serve you to your entire satisfaction.

ALWAYS GLAD TO SERVE YOU.

A neatly printed list of prices of this sale, showing prices realized for each lot of this sale, will be sent after the sale for only 25 cents. CASH WITH ORDER.

I regret that I am obliged to discontinue to send printed lists of prices of my sales free to bidders. Notwithstanding the rather heavy expense attached to the free distribution of these lists, I was in hopes of enlightening the young collectors as to the market values of coins, and thereby eliminate the ridiculous bids usually received at auction sales, and which cause so much annoyance to the cataloguer. But I was surprised to note the great number of ridiculously low bids received from collectors, evidently sent in merely for the purpose of receiving a free list of prices.

However, the lists will be sold at prices within the reach of all, and no collector should be without them. The lists will be neatly printed and mailed about 15 days after date of sale.
